Handwriting practice sheet with five rows of tracing exercises. Each row features a cartoon child on the left and a set of lines on the right. The first row shows a child with a magnifying glass and four circles (two solid, two dashed) with arrows indicating counter-clockwise direction. The second row shows a child with a magnifying glass and four circles (two solid, two dashed) with arrows indicating counter-clockwise direction. The third row shows a child with a pencil and four ovals (two solid, two dashed) with arrows indicating a clockwise path. The fourth row shows a child with a pencil and four ovals (two solid, two dashed) with arrows indicating a clockwise path. The fifth row shows a child with a pencil and four zigzag lines (two solid, two dashed) with arrows indicating the direction of the lines. A small circle is at the end of the bottom line.

A large rectangular box containing five rows of handwriting practice. Each row is bounded by two horizontal lines. The patterns are as follows:

- Row 1: A series of seven connected, rounded, teardrop-like shapes. A small arrow on the left points downwards, and a small dot on the right indicates the end of the row.
- Row 2: A series of seven connected, slanted, teardrop-like shapes. A small arrow on the left points upwards and to the right, and a small dot on the right indicates the end of the row.
- Row 3: A continuous wavy line pattern. A small arrow on the left points upwards and to the right, and a small dot on the right indicates the end of the row.
- Row 4: A series of four connected, rounded, teardrop-like shapes. A small arrow on the left points upwards and to the right, and a small dot on the right indicates the end of the row.
